

ABSTRACT

A description and storing method of an alignment information characterized by the separation of an alignment information on an amino-acid sequence or a nucleic-acid sequence into a sequence information and a gap information expressing correspondence between sequences.